

Abstract

In a mobile communication system employing the concept of transport channels in a medium access control layer, each transport channel is processed in a respectively selected manner and a code identifying said selected manners is included in the physical layer signal.